

ABSTRACT

A high frequency electrical signal control device comprises a transmitter for generating a high frequency electrical signal, a receiver, a
5 transmission line for propagating the electrical signal, and a structure for radiating the electrical signal propagated through the transmission line to the space or receiving a signal from the space. The degree of coupling of the electrical signal between 10 the space and the transmission line provided by the structure can be variably controlled.